Dear Parents/Carers,

This week we have officially opened our beautiful new School Library!

As you may remember, we won a competition through Charlton Athletic Community Trust and the National Literacy Trust last year. The prize was a complete library makeover, including £800 worth of brand new books. The work that footballer, Marcus Rashford, has done around free schools meals enabling pupils to access their learning, was incredibly influential in this project.

Mrs Archer was the driving force behind this project; from meeting with the designers a year ago to completing the finishing touches this week.

This project culminated in an official opening led by Anthony Quarm, our link to CACT, who cut the ribbon. We were also delighted that the Mayor of Royal Greenwich, Councillor Leo Fletcher, also attended and shared his love of reading.

This project has been supported by school funding as we felt that to make this a 'complete' makeover, we needed to include some additional developments. We have fitted exterior doors so that our older children can access this space during their break times and we have installed colour changing light panels to offer a calm space to children who may need it.

We can't wait for our children to start using this great space! Look out on Twitter and in SE9 Magazine for further information.

Have a lovely weekend,

Mrs Cutajar
