Dear Parents/Carers,

At Alderwood, we celebrated World Book Day on Thursday. The children arrived in so many fabulous costumes, and there was a buzz of excitement from everyone as they entered the building. In the morning, we spent time working together with different classes making bookworms, bookmarks and reading books together. Alongside this, each class worked hard all-day producing artwork based on a book they had studied in class. We then showed our hard work to each other in assembly. Overall, a wonderful day of reading and exploring book characters together. The children showed so much kindness, respect and confidence when working together. We all feel very proud of all of them! As you can see from the photos below, everyone had so much fun...

Thank you for your attendance at Parents' Evening earlier in the week. I hope you found these experiences both informative and valuable! It's always a great pleasure to share your child's learning experiences for everyone here at Alderwood. Our partnership is vital in ensuring children get the best possible experience during their time in primary school.

Wishing you all a lovely weekend. Very best wishes,

Mr Guy
